NEWS BRIEFS

ROK Election Day holiday,

The Republic of Korea Government has designated Dec. 19 Presidential Election Day, as a temporary public holiday. In accordance with USFK Regulation, Korean Nationals Korean employees of USFK will also observe this date as an official holiday.

AF eliminates O-3 boards

The Air Force will eliminate captain central selection boards for active-duty, Guard and Reserve officers beginning in 2003. The move will not only streamline the process for eligible first lieutenants — placing the decision point for promotion closer to those who know the officers best — but will also save the Air Force time, money and productivity by eliminating temporary duty trips for board members and preparation time at the centers.

TSP open season ends Dec. 31

Civilian and military employees still have time to sign up for or change Thrift Savings Plan accounts during the current open season. Changes made after Dec. 1 will become effective the beginning of the following pay period for civilians and the following month for military. Defense leaders discuss N. Korea's nuclear weapons, SOFA issues

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — The threat of North Korean nuclear weapons and missile technology was the main topic of the 34th Korea-U.S. Security Consultative Meeting, held here Dec. 4 and 5.

Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld and South Korean Minister of National Defense Lee, Jun spoke to the press following their meetings.

Rumsfeld said the men discussed the threat North Korea continues to pose and the fact that North Korea is pursuing nuclear weapons and continues to be "the most active proliferator" of ballistic missile technology in the world.

The minister said through a translator that the security environment on the Korean Peninsula is changing rapidly.

"In general, Korea and the United States harbor concurrent views on the North Korea nuclear issue," Lee said. "It is a serious problem that threatens peace on the Korean Peninsula, Northeast Asia and the world. This can be tolerated under no circumstances.

"Now that North Korea has confessed to developing nuclear weapons, I believe that [North Korean leader] Kim Jong Il must assume full responsibility in resolving this issue in a verifiable manner."

He stated there is no indication that North Korea is ready to start retesting intercontinental ballistic missiles, now, but said that the North has told Japan it might reconsider the moratorium on tests.

Both men agreed diplomacy is the best way to move the issue forward. They said Russia, China, Japan and the European Union must help the United States and the Republic of Korea move the North toward peace.

"Only time will tell what progress might be achieved, but there is no question but that situation in North Korea is very serious: They have violated several agreements and are proceeding on a very dangerous course," Rumsfeld said.

During the meetings, Rumsfeld and Lee spoke about a current "hot button" issue between the United States and South Korea — the deaths of two teenage girls during a training exercise in June. At the press conference, Rumsfeld repeated what he told the minister in the meetings.

"We regret the death of the two Korean girls ... who were killed during a military training exercise last June," he said. "Our thoughts and our prayers are with their families."

The United States and the Republic of Korea are working closely together to prevent future such tragedies, Rumsfeld said.

Why ask Why?

The importance of asking questions

Senior Airman Andrew Svoboda
8th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

As far back as I remember, I've been told, "no question is a stupid question" or "if something doesn't make sense just ask."

When we joined the military, we all took the oath stating we "follow the orders of the officers appointed over us."

Our military system works and operates using a rank system that practically mirrors the upper, middle and lower management tiers of the civilian corporate world. Or vice versa, depending on your point of view.

Like successful big businesses, our Air Force changes with the times in order to stay the best. One of the ways we can do that is to listen to the input of our junior troops, enlisted and officer.

It may seem radically inappropriate to the airmen fresh out of a training environment to ask questions, but for the enhancement of their unit and the Air Force as a whole, I encourage airmen to speak up.

Often times, a process is done a certain way because "that's the way it's always been done." Our junior airmen and officers offer a fresh set of eyes and new perspectives on systems that veterans may not even realize are antiquated. It's these fresh ideas that make young people such a hot commodity in the corporate world.

Of course there is a time and place for everything. An order is an order and shouldn't be questioned. As military members, it's important for us to know when it's appropriate to ask questions and offer our input.

When commanders gives an order, they are looking at the situation from a broader scope. If a request doesn't make sense, the best thing to do is ask your supervisor. Personally, I'm more motivated when I understand the importance of the project I'm working on.

Attitude is another important aspect of asking questions. When asking your supervisor, don't say, "This is stupid. Why do I have to do this?" Ask with the intention of actually receiving an answer, "This doesn't make sense to me. Is there a reason why we're doing it this way?"

Supervisors, embrace questions from your troops. These questions provide an opportunity for you to help them understand their job and their role in the Air Force. Don't let the communication chain end with you. If you can see a process is inefficient, and you're only doing it because that's the way it's always been done, let upper management know. It may seem like a daunting task to change one of those "we've always done it this way" processes, but the Air Force is about leaving a shop better than you found it. Excellence in all you do, and that includes challenging the system to ensure you leave a shop better than you found it.

Let's embrace questions, not discourage them, and help our base and Air Force stay as up-to-date and current as possible.

Hackers exploit human weakness

By Laurie G. Knepper
Joint STARS Test Force senior computer systems manager

MELBOURNE, Fla. —

Are you familiar with the term "social engineering"? If not, you probably don't know the potential impact of social engineering on the Air Force and national security. And that means you could be an unwitting participant.

Social engineering relies on weakness in human nature rather than weaknesses in hardware, software or network design.

The goal of social engineering is to trick people into revealing passwords, network vulnerabilities or other information that will help the hacker get access to important data. Using social engineering, even someone with lousy computer skills can find his or her way into a supposedly secure computer system and access, modify or destroy the data on it.

How are your social engineering defenses?

— Do you lock your work station before leaving your desk, or do you leave it up to a screensaver to kick in a little while later?

— Would you decline to give your password to someone who said, over the phone or in an e-mail, that he or she was debugging a problem with your account, and then contact your computer security representatives immediately, or would you comply with the password request?

— Do you challenge strangers in the hall who don't display a proper badge, or do you assume because they are in nice suits that they are probably too important to be questioned?

— Would you stop a clean-cut uniformed delivery person carrying packages who flashes a smile and asks where the mailroom is as he attempts to tailgate into a secure building with you, or would you politely hold the door open for him and point him toward the mailroom?

— Do you shred old phone lists, or do you simply dump them in the trash or recycle bin?

— Would you decline to participate in a phone survey that asks a bunch of questions about your organization's computer systems, or would you participate to get the "free gift"?

— Do you leave work discussions at work, or do you discuss Air Force business over meals at local restaurants?

In case you have any doubt, the first action in each of these examples reflects proper security practices, while the second action reflects poor security or outright security violations.

Computer Security Tips

- Know your security point of contact
- Keep passwords secret
- Use a password-locked-screensaver or log out when you leave your desk
- Don't let unauthorized people have physical access to your computer or your network
- Be aware what software you run and be wary of software from unknown origins
- Don't download software from the Internet
- Report security problems as soon as possible to your security representative

Construction begins on new commissary

Event marks base history milestone

By Senior Airman Andrew Svoboda
8th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Groundbreaking for the base's new commissary construction project took place at the site next to the base exchange last week.

This project marks the first time a building at Kunsan has ever been designated to serve as a commissary since the base opened.

This $5.2 million dollar project, awarded to the Shinsaebye Construction Co. LTD. by the Army Corps of Engineers, will provide a new commissary twice the size of the old store, complete with many new additions, said Larry Andrews, Kunsan Commissary store director.

"The new 15,000 square-foot store will offer wider aisles, a larger produce area and will be more centrally located," said Andrews.

The new location is the former site of building 1100, which over the years housed facilities such as the class six convenience store and the sporting goods shop.

The decision to build the new store came in the late 1990s after Kunsan came off the base closure list. This addition to the base is just one of the many quality of life improvements in the "2015" plan, which also includes a new gym, education center and dormitories.

"In the past, we've used vacated facilities and buildings to house the commissary," said Andrews. "The building currently being used is an old dining facility."

Wolf Pack members here now won't see the completed store during their tour, as it's scheduled to open in 2004, but that doesn't mean they may not ever see it.

"Korea is one of the few short-tours left. Many people who spend their careers in the Air Force do more than one assignment in Korea," said Andrews. "Building this commissary goes right along with the Wolf Pack mission of accepting follow-on forces. We're trying to plan now and make things as nice as we can for those who come after us."

SECURITY

Two Americans were charged with manslaughter in the deaths of the girls. A U.S. court-martial cleared the soldiers, which led to demonstrations against the U.S. presence in the country.

Factions in Korea called for changing the Status of Forces Agreement between the U.S. and S. Korea to allow the Koreans to try the soldiers. The men discussed the SOFA during the meeting. The accident was tragic, but changing the SOFA would not have prevented it.

"The SOFA was revised two years ago," Rumsfeld said. "We see it as a mutually beneficial agreement and we could not see any way that any change in it could have avoided the accident."

Rumsfeld and Lee stressed the relationship between the U.S. and S. Korea remains solid. "The friendship that exists between the United States and the Republic of Korea is deep and longstanding, as is the alliance that has kept the peace on the Korean Peninsula for some five decades," he said.

Wolf Pack spreads holiday cheer

Members collect gifts, donations for local children this holiday

By 1st Lt. Heather Healy
8th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

8th Fighter Wing personnel looking to donate time, money or toys to a worthy cause this holiday season can contact several Wolf Pack organizations with cheer-giving efforts already underway.

The 8th Operations Group has set up Angel Trees at RAPCON [Radar Approach and Control], the control tower, airfield management operations, the 80th Fighter Squadron and the 35th FS for the children of the Kae-Chong orphanage.

According to Tech. Sgt. Michael Polley, Operations Support Squadron, those interested in participating need to take a name off the tree, buy a gift for the child, wrap it and put it back in the box with the name of the child attached. All presents need to be purchased and delivered to the Angel Trees by Wednesday.

The 8th Supply and Transportation squadrons have also united in an Angel Tree effort of their own. The members of these squadrons have purchased gifts for 80 children at Ku Se Kun children's home in Kunsan City.

The gifts will be presented to the children Saturday at a Christmas party complete with candy, ice cream, cake and a Santa Claus, said Tech. Sgt. Valerie Waldon, 8th Supply Squadron.

The 8th Security Forces Squadron has an Angel Tree with a twist. SFS has developed a Samsung Orphanage committee dedicated to raising holiday funds and purchasing gifts for the orphans.

With one Angel Tree in the Defender's Den and another at Pass and ID, those who are interested in giving this holiday season but don't have the time to shop for a gift, can make cash donations toward the children.

According to Tech. Sgt. Russell Leatherman, 8th SFS, the orphanage committee will work closely with the orphanage to purchase items the children need such as winter clothes, shoes and jackets, as well as fun things like toys and candy.

All donations need to be in to SFS by Friday in order to purchase items for the Dec. 21 Christmas party at the orphanage.

The Medical Group is currently taking donations for the Baby Moses Orphanage in Kunsan City, but not for gifts towards individual children. Their vision is set on purchasing a brand new washer and dryer for the orphanage.

"Theirs [washer and dryer] are pretty old and need to be replaced. They go through a lot of clothing," said Senior Airman Melissa Dusek, 8th Medical Group. "We asked them what they needed most for the orphanage and that was their biggest thing."

The Wolf Pack doesn't lack volunteers willing to reach out to the local community to make the holiday season a little brighter, but those who volunteer might be surprised at how much cheer they receive in return.

"They [Samsung orphans] are practicing their carols," Leatherman said. "They're working just as hard to make a nice Christmas for us as we are for them."

Bring the Noise

Wolf Pack Gospel group grooves to a different beat

Photos By Senior Airman Andrew Svoboda

By Senior Airman Andrew Svoboda
8th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

There's lots of musical talent at Kunsan, but not all of it's found at the clubs. For this very reason, one of the best jazz, rhythm and soul groups on base may be one you've never heard.

This isn't a problem for the members of the Joyful Noise Mass Choir, who sing every Sunday during the Gospel Service at the base chapel and Friday nights in the Inspirational Praise and Worship Service.

The 20-member choir agree that making music is not about fame and recognition, but an opportunity to be filled with spirit and surrounded by good friends.

The group, consisting of alto, tenor and soprano singers, as well as drums, keyboards, guitars and horns, was merely known as the Kunsan Gospel Choir until Staff Sgt. Jason Webber, a quality assurance inspector with the 8th Maintenance Group, arrived last February. Webber added nearly 15 years of musical experience as well as a new name to the group.

"I suggested the name 'Joyful Noise' from a Bible scripture that reads, 'Make a joyful noise unto the Lord all ye lands,'" said Webber.

Webber's musical background and date of arrival allowed him to practically walk into the position of choir director.

"The current minister of music was leaving around the time I arrived," he said. "That, and I have been involved in music for most of my life."

Growing up, Webber developed a love for choir music by watching his mother who was in a choir. At age 16, he became involved with choirs himself. The Pontiac, Michigan native plays the organ, piano and keyboards and has a love for all styles of music, but says he's remained with gospel because of his convictions.

In recent years, Webber was selected to record two original songs at the Edwin Hawkins Music and Arts seminar, after submitting his music. At the seminar, which he's attended for the past five years, he directed professional musicians to play his original work.

Many members of the Joyful Noise Mass Choir don't have the musical background Webber possesses, however experience is not a factor when it comes to participating with the group.

"When we're singing, we're singing for Him [God]," said soft-spoken Senior Airman Charron Jackson, an comptroller flight troop and member of the choir.

Jackson had not been involved with any musical pursuits until joining a choir during basic training. She wasn't a regular member of her church community at her last base, but she says she's had a complete turnaround in her life since joining the group here.

"A guy at work kept asking me to come to church. Finally I went just to get him to shut-up," she joked. "I loved it! It's a great atmosphere and nothing else matters outside these walls."

Jackson, like many members of the choir, equate being a part of the choir as being part of a family, something especially important at a remote assignment like Kunsan.

"We go out to eat and do things together. We look out for each other. [The group] picks you up when you're down and watches out for you," she said.

Senior Airman Derrick Caldwell, 8th Civil Engineer Squadron, has barely been at Kunsan a month. Although he's never been in a choir before, Caldwell did some soul-searching upon arriving here and now finds himself among the Joyful Noise singers.

"I'm in a new place, and I've got a lot of time away from friends and family," said the new member. "There was some nervousness at first, but once you get over the initial fear, it's

"Singing really helps me understand the words and the songs stay with you throughout the week. That helps me keep my faith up," said Caldwell.

The group is managed by members, but is overall part of the base's chapel program. Capt. [Chaplain] Randall Jamieson, who oversees the Gospel Service and the Friday night services, said the Joyful Noise Mass Choir is a very important part of the ministry at Kunsan.

"I've seen a considerable growth take place in our Sunday and Friday night services. This is in part to the choir."

The self-motivation demonstrated by members and especially by Webber is inspiring and sets this choir apart from groups Jamieson has worked with in the past.

"I haven't seen a choir, nor a praise band, like this in all my time in the Air Force," said Jamieson. "At other bases where I have served, the choir is much smaller. Here, we have as many as 20 people participating in the Joyful Noise Mass Choir."

The Praise Band, which supports the choir, does an outstanding job, he said.

"Many of them once played for Tops in Blue and the Air Force Band. It's exciting to have this kind of talent at Kunsan.

"The members of the choir and Praise Band seek to express their faith in God through music. They also seek to encourage one another through prayer. Most of all, being a member of this group has helped them in their relationship with God," he said.

The group is well received not only at the chapel, but throughout the base. Recently, the group was invited to perform at the September 11 memorial service, the base Christmas tree lighting ceremony and a wedding reception at the Loring Club. The group will also join other Air Force personnel for a performance at Osan next month.

Singing with the spirit in their hearts and a newfound family away from home, the choir is inspired and inspires positivity throughout the Wolf Pack.

Local band opens for Quiet Riot

Steal Wool maintains rockin' Kunsan tradition

By Senior Airman Andrew Svoboda
8th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

While many "garage bands" play for fun at friends' parties or at local clubs, few ever get the opportunity to "rock out" in front of a sold-out stadium.

Local Kunsan rockers Steal Wool, a group made up of 35th Fighter Squadron pilots, will get that chance when they open for Quiet Riot Saturday.

"This is great for us," said Lt. Col. Tom "T-Bone" Abbott, guitarist for Steal Wool. "We all listened to Quiet Riot when we were younger."

Steal Wool is usually found playing crowds of about 30 people, at venues like the Loring Club and Delta.

Sharing the stage with Quiet Riot at Hangar 3 promises to be a much different experience. Are they worried? "Ask me again the day of," Abbott joked. "No, we're not worried."

"It's an honor to play with Quiet Riot, and we're just happy to play for the troops. Free entertainment is a good thing, especially at Kunsan."

Steal Wool was actually started about 10 years ago by Panton pilots. When members leave, new people always fill-in, keeping the band going all these years. Current members include Abbott, Capt. William "General" Lee on bass, Maj. Jim "Shredder" Sears on vocals and Maj. Denny "Mooc" Lewis on drums, with occasional guest help from other Wolf Pack members.

"Steal Wool was in hibernation for about six months last year," said Abbott. "When I got here, we found there were a few guys with a little musical knowledge, and we put the band back together."

Lewis and Abbott, who've both been playing at least 10 years, also played together in a band while stationed at Aviano Air Base, Italy.

"The band is a hobby for all of us," said Abbott. "We don't deploy so much here, so there's more time to work on things like playing music."

Despite the band being all about having fun, members do practice at least twice a week. Influenced by bands like Offspring, Blink 182 and Foo Fighters, as well as John Lee Hooker and ZZ Top, the band plays mostly cover songs, but may look into writing some originals.

One question still remains, and that's the origin of the band's name. "Let's just say, it's the traditional Panton Band name..." said Abbott.

Security Forces' Town Patrol keep USFK troops safe off-base

By Capt. Alisen Iversen
8th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Weeknights are slow, but weekends are a whole different story," said Staff Sgt. Gary Charles, NCOIC of 8th Security Forces Squadron's "Town Patrol."

As Town Patrol members, Charles and his seven security forces troops enforce standards of conduct in American Town, patrol all off-limit areas downtown, and make periodic checks of areas in Kunsan City where U.S. Forces Korea members frequent.

American Town, commonly called A-Town, is certainly not the typical Air Force work environment. Located approximately five miles from Kunsan's front gate, A-Town houses numerous bars, nightclubs, restaurants and a few small stores.

Town Patrol exists to keep USFK personnel safe and out of trouble with the local authorities.

"We keep people from doing things they shouldn't," said Charles.

Town Patrol is also a deterrent for terrorism. When patrolling A-Town's streets, Town Patrol troops monitor U.S. and non-U.S. patrons. They document how many people, by nationality, are in each club on weekend nights to determine patronage trends.

They also enforce the "no backpack rule." This force protection measure helps prevent explosives or weapons from being brought into A-Town.

Enforcing the A-Town standards of conduct takes up most of their time.

"The rules are so simple, if people would just follow them we would have no trouble," said Senior Airman Lawrence Vaden, 8th Security Forces Town Patrol member. "We try to do things that are in their best interest and get them home safe."

During a weeknight in A-Town, Town Patrol may only see two-dozen troops. On a Friday or Saturday night, they usually see about 300. On a "good" night they have counted more than 600 patrons.

On these busier nights, the security forces members enlist the help of base volunteers.

These volunteers, commanders representatives or com reps, augment the security forces on weekends. These com reps are from various units on base, including the Army patriot batteries.

Charles said without the com reps their job would be nearly impossible. "The com reps are a God send. They are our eyes and ears when we are tied up. They keep the peace," he said.

Capt. Christopher Chesser, 8th Fighter Wing and a recent first-time com rep, said he volunteered because it's important to stay involved. "I feel officers and NCOs should maintain awareness of issues that affect the well being of their troops," he said.

Pfc. Nicholas Scheitlin, Foxrot Patriot Battery and another recent first-time com rep, added, "I'm not old enough to drink so I thought I'd help keep my fellow soldiers out of trouble."

There are occasional fights, but Charles said that isn't what takes up a majority of their time.

"People not leaving when the clubs close, drinking outside the clubs and destruction of private property are the biggest problems we have," he said.

"I get really tired of people disregarding what we ask them to do. It isn't personal," said Vaden. "They arrest themselves. I just do the paperwork."

The paperwork is important. If a Town Patrol member stops a troop for doing something against the community standards, they conduct a field interview on the spot. Based on the answers and if the infraction isn't too severe, the Town Patrol member may just instruct the member to go home.

If the infraction is severe or is something that could warrant Uniform Code of Military Justice action, the member is detained, escorted to the Town Patrol office, read their rights, transported to the base and released to their first sergeant.

All of the field interview information, including the individual's name, is kept in the Town Patrol office. They also keep track of the infractions, which helps them determine the members who are multiple offenders.

"Commanders have called to ask if a particular troop of theirs has been in trouble," said Charles.

Charles will verify if they have had any "run-ins" with the member or not and discuss any possible trends.

Town Patrol members work closely with bar owners and employees to ensure there aren't any problems. Many patrol members have formed friendships with DJs and periodically invite them to play basketball, or work-out on base.

Not all 8th SFS members work Town Patrol. The Town Patrol NCOIC is selected based on a resume and their EPRs. The NCOIC then handpicks each new member based on the same criteria.

Town Patrol members have a rotating workweek. They work 5 p.m. to 1 a.m. every weeknight and 5 p.m. to at least 2 a.m. on weekends.

They have two weekdays off a week, and three weekdays days off every other week.

Despite the late hours, not having any weekends off, and dealing with drunken service members during the majority of their shifts, the Town Patrol members say they really enjoy it.

Vaden likes being able to put into practice what he was taught at security forces training.

"Pursuit on foot, physical contact — it all happens in A-Town," said Vaden. "This is the best job I've ever had a chance to do. I was ready not to be a cop anymore before this," he said.

Senior Airman Charles Hernandez, another member of Town Patrol, agreed and said it is a nice change from typical security forces work, but doesn't think they are always appreciated.

"I don't think people understand what we really go through," said Hernandez. "The way people talk to you — you don't even know how many times I've had puke on my boots," he said.

The members of Town Patrol are very close. "I don't have many friends on base. This is my family," said Vaden.

When asked what he was going to remember most about his A-Town assignment, Charles said, "I had the greatest seven people in the world working for me."

Senior Airman Charles Hernandez, 8th Security Forces Squadron Town Patrol member, confirms an individual's identification.

SFS-A shut off COMM-A 49-40

By Staff Sgt. Chuck Walker
8th Communications Squadron

Needing a boost in their intramural basketball game against the 8th Communications Squadron Monday, the 8th Security Forces A team turned to Chris Blackmon...and Blackmon delivered.

Blackmon, SFS A player and assistant coach, scored all 10 of his points in the second half and added six assists, while Stuart Howard scored a team-high 12 points to lead the Cops to a 49-40 come-from-behind victory against COMM A.

Howard said that Blackmon's presence in the second half not only helped the team, but took the load off of him offensively.

"He did take a lot of pressure off of me when he came in the game," Howard said. "Instead of guarding just me, they had to worry about him and that opened up the offense for everybody."

At first Blackmon was intent on sitting the game out and concentrating on coaching, during the second half he thought otherwise and decided to lend a hand.

"The team was doing good, but I saw some things going on and wanted to get us on the right track," said Blackmon, also a member of the varsity team. "I just got the ball rolling."

Rolling he did.
The Cops looked much crisper in the second half with Blackmon on the bench. COMM A took advantage of Blackmon's absence in the first half by taking a 19-18 lead at halftime.

The second half was a different story. Blackmon sparked a 15-5 run to open the second session, accounting for 11 of the points himself, four scoring and the others on assists.

When he finally went back to the bench with 5:30 left in the game, the Cops had a commanding lead at 42-28 and never looked back.

Howard said this was a good win for the Cops.

"This feels pretty good," Howard said. "Right now, we're trying a few different things with our lineup, so we can know what we're going to have when guys PCS. We're still winning, but we still have some things we can work on. But this was a good way to start the regular season."

Tim Parlor led COMM A scoring a game-high 20 points.

Parlor said that despite the loss, he felt his team played strong.

"It was a pretty good season-opening game," Parlor said. "We have a few more things we need to work on, like rebounding and boxing out, but we played pretty well. We haven't had a good chance to work together as a team in practice. But we'll bounce back, we have a good team."

For the Cops, it was a perfect way to start the regular season. With winning the preseason tournament last week and now starting the regular season off with a win, Blackmon said he feels the Cops have things going well.

"This is a small step in the right direction," Blackmon said. "We still have a lot of things to work on, like our conditioning, boxing out, rebounding and making good passes. Those things are going to make the difference the entire season."

"We just want to be able to play fundamentally sound basketball. If we do that, everything else will take care of itself," he said.

Navy destroys Army 58-12

Candeto ties school six touchdown record

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. —

Quarterback Craig Candeto set a school record with six rushing touchdowns as he led the Midshipmen of Navy to a lopsided 58-12 win over the Army Black Knights in the 103rd meeting between the two service academies.

The victory put an end to a 10-game slide for the Midshipmen (2-10), who won their season opener versus SMU in Dallas, 38-7. They have now captured three of the last four meetings with the Black Knights (1-11) and three of the four contests that have taken place at Giants Stadium.

Candeto finished the contest with 18 carries for 103 yards and completed 4-of-5 passes for 87 yards and a score. Army, which was held to 56 yards rushing on 30 attempts, was paced by Reggie Nevels, who completed 15-of-27 for 171 yards and the only touchdown for the Black Knights in the contest.

Candeto opened the day's scoring with a one-yard touchdown run midway through the first quarter. The Black Knights followed that with a 27-yard field goal by Joe Riley, his first of two on the day.

Seconds into the second period, Candeto struck again with another one-yard rushing score to give the Middies a 14-3 advantage.

Navy beat Army by an unprecedented, lop-sided score of 58-12.

noon, a 21-yard effort, cut the deficit to 14-6, but the game belonged to Navy the rest of the way as it scored 44 unanswered points.

Candeto added touchdown runs of 42 and seven yards to close out the first half and give the Midshipmen a 28-6 lead.

The third quarter saw Navy tally 23 points on a pair of touchdown runs by Candeto, from three and one yard out, as well as a 23-yard scoring pass from Candeto to Tony Lane. Just prior to Lane's score, the Middies recorded a safety as the ball traveled through end zone. Navy held a 51-6 lead after three periods.

The Midshipmen scored their final points of the game on a 10-yard scoring run by Bryce McDonald, pushing the score to 58-6 with 13:45 left in the contest.

The Black Knights finally found the end zone on a 36-yard scoring strike from Nevels to Aaron Alexander, who finished the day with four catches for 65 yards. The extra-point kick failed, leaving Army with a 46-point deficit with 12:11 remaining. Navy produced 508 yards of total offense, including 421 yards on the ground, compared to just 241 yards overall for the Black Knights.
